IAP+NEECA TO WORK JOINTLY ON THE ECBC CITIZENS GUIDE

IAP

In a significant step towards mainstreaming energy efficiency in Pakistan's built environment, the Institute of Architects Pakistan (IAP) hosted a collaborative meeting with the National Energy Efficiency & Conservation Authority (NEECA) on October 16, 2025, at the IAP Secretariat in Islamabad. The meeting, attended by key figures from both organizations, served as a direct follow-up to last week's Conservation Conversation, focusing on the practical implementation of the Energy Conservation Building Code (ECBC).

The IAP delegation was led by President Ar. Fawad Suhail Abbasi, and included Vice President Ar. Dr. Samra Mohsin Khan, Past President IAP Ar. Jahangir Khan Sherpao, Past Vice Chairperson IAP-RIC Ar. Shazia Qureshi, IAP Green Initiative Lead Ar. Haadiya Abbas, and COO IAP Mr. Farhan Siddiqui. They were joined by NEECA's team, comprising Director of Awareness & Outreach Ms. Mahwish Khan, and Assistant Directors Mr. Bilal Ali and Mr. Fahad Rashid. The core consensus of the discussion was that while the ECBC provides an essential technical backbone, a critical communication gap prevents its widespread adoption. To bridge this gap, IAP and NEECA have agreed to jointly develop a "Citizen's Guide to Energy-Efficient Buildings." This initiative aims to translate the Code's technicalities into a practical, understandable narrative for homeowners, developers, and young architects, clearly illustrating the "why" and "how" of energy-smart construction in cost-saving terms.

The long-term goal is to build organic demand for efficient buildings, steering Pakistan towards sustainable urban growth through informed choice rather than regulatory enforcement alone. To further this mission, both organizations have planned a joint roundtable to raise awareness about the ECBC among practicing architects and architecture students, while also emphasizing the need to onboard key stakeholders like CDA, PEC, PCATP, and the HVACR Society to ensure a cohesive and effective implementation strategy nationwide. The efforts are to start this from the Federal Capital and take them to provincial authorities in phase two.
